RANGER'S LOG

presenting the 1967 ranger's log

To everything turn, turn . . .
There is a season and a time to every purpose under heaven.

From the Class of 1967

In America today there is a strong undercurrent of change, a trend to cast off some of the stodgy traditions of the past and create something new and vibrant. Some of the modern writers and artists exemplify this very trend. Classical forms of their arts are being replaced by simpler expressive and impressive means. Art galleries are filled with blocks of wood and splotches of paint, some of which can be explained only by their creators; yet, they convey something deeper and more meaningful than could ever be expressed in words.

But the greater part of the change in America is not as apparent as this. With the country demanding more and more skilled individuals, schools and universities are growing and turning out thousands of highly educated persons to become the leaders and molders of the present and future. Here lies the challenge to the high school student. Each day changes, new ideas and concepts are an integral part of his life. Competition today is tough and failures or successes are determined by an individual's ability to change. Our theme is to express this modern, changing America.

dedication

Because of his warmth of character and his undaunted courage in tolerating us through both revolution and periods of temporary stability; and because his classes have contributed much to our high school days and our futures, we the class of 1967 proudly dedicate this yearbook to an historian most deserving, Mr. William Perham.

Principal's Message

To the Class of '67'

The Ranger theme, "Modern", leaves me in a quandary. What is "Modern"? If we listen to some, we hear op art, the mod look, head splitting amplified guitars and nasal wailing. These all seem to be "Modern". To others the emphasis is on fear of the H-bomb, confusion or despair over Vietnam, distrust and conflict between adults and adolescents. I'm not so sure. A generation ago it was impressionistic art, bell-bottomed dungarees, and be-bop. There was fear of Depression hunger, confusion and despair over Nazi Germany, distrust and conflict between adults and adolescents. At least, I'm sure I had as much difficulty understanding my father's restrictive views as my son has understanding the same views I now have. Then, is anything really "Modern that matters?"

Try these: concern for the well-being of our neighbors, acceptance or rejection of a person because of his character and personality not his race or religion, importance and increase of knowledge and understanding. Nothing modern here; the theory of such concepts has been known for ages. Still, I believe we are gradually learning to put theory into practice. On the whole, I think your generation has moved closer to practice them than mine did. Perhaps your generation's contribution will be more conviction and less lip-service so that the old-fashioned theories will be modern practice. If so, "Modern" will mean much more than be-bop or rock-n-roll.

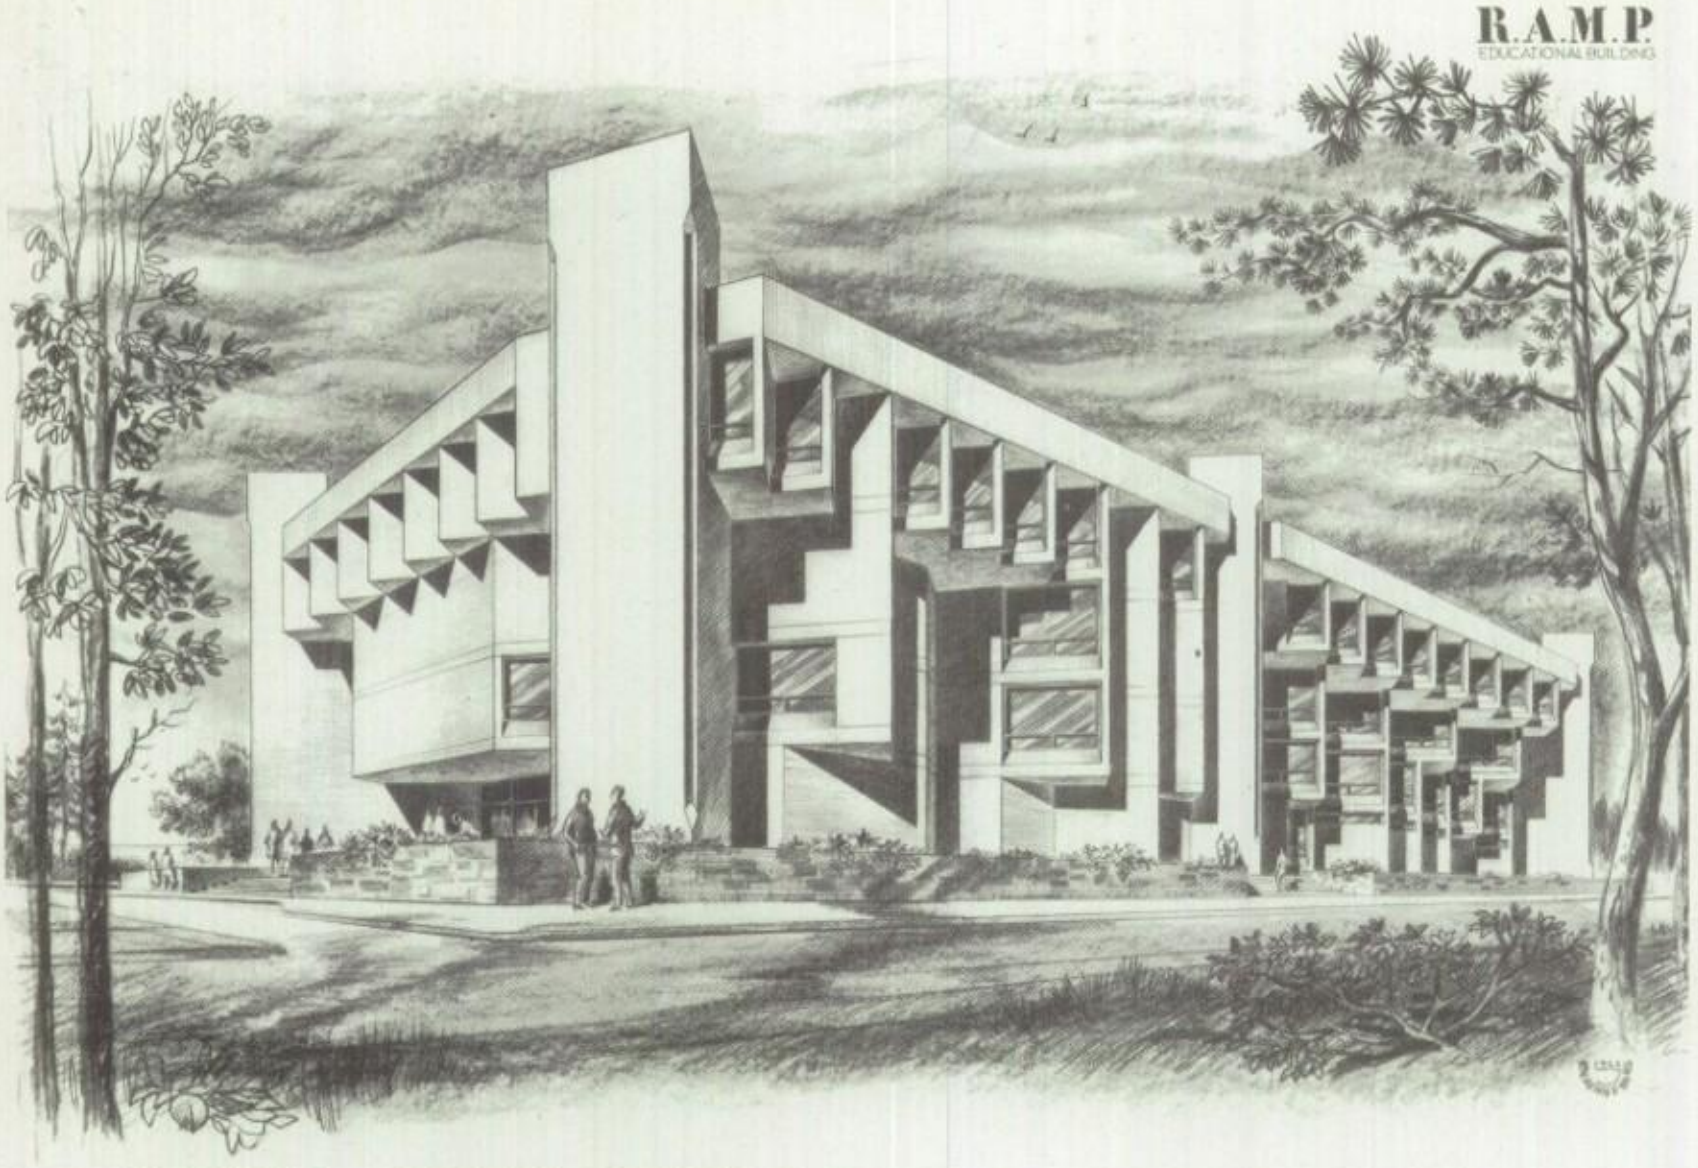
RAMP



REGIONAL ACADEMIC MARINE PROGRAM · KITTERY, MAINE

HENNEBERG & HENNEBERG - ARCHITECTS AND CITY PLANNERS - 806 MASSACHUSETTS AVE., CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

The joint committee of R. W. Traip Academy has received a planning grant to begin preliminary planning of a marine study program for the region, known as the Regional Academic Marine Program (RAMP). The architect's drawing shows the Educational Building as it will be completed, containing an instructional museum with an aquarium and auditorium, marine science library, two laboratory-seminar rooms, and students' and instructors' research laboratories.

RAMP is the first secondary school program of its kind in the United States allowing intensive study of oceanic habitation beyond that normally offered in secondary school science courses, plus the opportunity for post-graduate instructions to further research. The growing necessity of the ocean to our national survival dictates that the American public be educated in the numerous aspects of marine science if the salt water farm is to be more widely used as a source of food. RAMP will hopefully achieve a gradually amplified exposure of the regional elementary student to the ocean's flora and fauna while offering the adult population a cultural center with planned programs to bring them in contact with outstanding persons and informative materials in oceanography.

Oklahoma

Oklahoma, the second musical presented at Traip Academy, was produced and directed by William Traber and orchestrated by Sumner Elwell. Members of the school chorus, band, and student body participated in presenting Oklahoma. Mr. Traber was also aided by the faculty and town members to make Oklahoma a success.

Some of the cast was:

Aunt Eller ..... Marguerite Soucy
Curly ..... Rod Smith
Laurey ..... Leslie Dawson
Will Parker ..... Chris Alvord
Jud Fry ..... Dave Collins
Ado Annie ..... Connie Neison
Ali Hakim ..... Dave Powell

Traip Assemblies

We were very honored and privileged this year at Traip to have Mr. Gary Merrill read to us an excellent collection of poetry by Carl Sandburg and Robert Frost.

We also had as our guest Mr. Otto Schmidt, who with the help of several "volunteers" demonstrated different stunts on the trampoline. He gave us a very entertaining and delightful assembly.

Another of our assemblies featured Chief Wanbonnet, a Sioux Indian from South Dakota. He told the student body some very interesting facts about his tribe and the American Indian.

These special assemblies, along with our sports awards assemblies, have helped to round out our school year at Traip, as well as to entertain and inform us.

The 1966-1967 Student Council played a vital part in the lives of the students at Traip Academy. The organization collected food for the needy at Thanksgiving and toys at Christmas. They also organized a Winter Carnival, continued their efforts to raise money for a foreign exchange student, and set up a concession stand at the football games. A delegation was sent to the Maine State Student Council meeting and brought back many ideas to our Council for the future.

The purpose of Safety Council is to promote safety habits and eliminate safety hazards. One way in which this is done is through the monitor system. Throughout the year the members have stressed the importance of traffic safety and have performed many civic services in the school. In its work to improve the school, the Safety Council distributed Civil Defense posters to each homeroom, set up a safety bulletin board and suggestion box, and held the annual bicycle rodeo in the spring.

Participation and willingness to go to the Big "A" were not lacking, but the snow was. Since the snowfall was late this year, the trips on Thursday night did not start until late Dec. When the snow became more plentiful, the skiiers had more of a chance to exercise their skills on the lighted slopes of the chair lift.

Varsity Basketball 1966-1967

The 1966-1967 Traip Rangers enjoyed an excellent season, considering there were only 2 returning lettermen (Dave Collins and Marion Pawlek). Under the new coach Leo Smith, they compiled a 12-3 regular season record and a 13-5 over all. This record enabled Traip to return to Western Maine L L Tournament after missing it last year. Included in the record was a win over Stephens of Rumford in the Portsmouth, Christmas Tournament which gave Traip second place in the tournament.

Although the team was one of the smallest ever to play for Traip, it showed fine spirit all year and was feared for its ability to score points in a hurry. With 7 returning Varsity players we will be looking forward, with anticipation, to next year and our victory of L!

Runner-Up Award—Rick Caron

Mr. Rodis would like to give special recognition to the many townspeople who have contributed their time to the successful 5th and 6th grade program, to Mr. Jon Gordon for his work with the Frisbee Junior High, and especially to Mr. Cy Collins who has worked for the Kittery youth for years playing many roles, the latest being co-ordinator of a summer basketball program. Without the aid of these dedicated people Traip's basketball program would not be as successful as it has been this or any year. So ends a fantastic season which will be impossible to beat.

Participating for the last time in Double LL classification, our unbelievable J.V.'s, averaging 81 points to their opponents 47, sky-rocketed to heights unequalled in Traip history. Surpassing their own all time high against Double L Oxford Hills 115-59, they ended the 1966-1967 basketball season in a blaze of glory taking the measure of prep school Berwick Academy 120-62. No matter what combination Mr. Rodis used throughout the season it seemed a winning one with everyone on the team contributing to the team's success, not only the so-called starting five. Mr. Rodis's prediction of a banner year for the Varsity next year is something all Traip fans are looking forward to. With such outstanding players as Jefferson Robinson (who scored the first hundredth point in Traip's history plus receiving the Most Valuable Player Award), Richard Caron, (co-captain, playmaker, and receiver of the Runner Up Award), Barry Fletcher (top rebounder), and Franklin Foss (top scorer) to name a few, plus the nucleus coming back from this year's veteran varsity squad, the goal is to have a year similar to the 1966-1967 Junior Varsity.

Zel rings the bell as the Rangers score again.

Freshman Basketball

Freshman basketball is a learning period—a beginning. Despite the agonies of bruised muscles, strained nerves, and lost games each participant contributes that which he can—to the game and the school. It is during such a process that each player, whether he is aware of it or not, develops a sense of team effort, esprit de corps, and unselfishness. It is also at this time that future stars produce a faint flicker—a spark of hope for varsity observers . . .

It is to be hoped that the latter benefits are realized; but if it be only the former, the freshman experience will have proved victorious.

Girls' Basketball

The girls' 1966-1967 basketball team did not do very well if winning the game is all one is considering. But winning is not the most important aspect of sports for girls. As the old saying goes, "It's not whether you win or lose that counts, it's how you play the game." The girls worked very hard and played very hard. They tried their best, but they came up against stiff competition. For a team that had a minority of veterans, the girls worked well together. Not only did they learn to play as a team, rather than as individuals, but they also learned about fair play.

Wrestling 1967

The varsity wrestling team had many individual wrestlers who showed a great deal of dedication and leadership during the 1967 season. Lack of experience in many of the weight classes was a prime factor in many of the losses suffered during the year.

The varsity wrestling team was represented by the following people according to their weight class:

Traip had probably its best track season in 1966 with a well-balanced, high-scoring team, compiling a 10 win, 3 loss record and a second place in the Southern York County meet. Scoring was led by Chris Alvord, Glen Ayer, Dave Dodge, and Robert Evans, all of whom competed in the state meet at South Portland. Chris Alvord turned in a fine 10.2 sec. in the 100 yd. dash, good enough for second place, Glen Ayer reached 11 feet in the pole vault, Dave Dodge ran for 56.5 sec. in the 440 yd. run, and Bob Evans threw the javelin 180 ft.

This comeback reflected the tremendous efforts of Coach Lorring in molding a contending team, The boys really put their hearts in it, and made Traip a worry for opposing coaches.

God Is A Man With Matches

He can light them with a quick, sounding flash,
And let them die in a charred, glowing ash.
It can be some dim light that burns alone,
One dying, one crying in a temporal tone.
Or one burning lustrously bright,
And whose brilliance causes others to ignite.
For a brief second the match is afire,
Others wait; its life will soon expire.
The smoldering Match on the floor discarded,
With the burning, urning forever quieted.
One might have killed some Chicagoan,
Or lit some eternal flame,
These we remember, the Matches of claim.

The Boy

What are ya going to be, boy,
What are ya going to do?
Are ya going to take some pot, boy,
And tell the guys you flew?

Or will ya get some roots, boy,
And plant 'em nice and deep,
And dig yourself a grave, boy,
And never wake from sleep.

Or will ya join the army, boy,
And learn to kill the Chinks,
And get killed in the bargain, boy,
Or teeter on the brink.

Why don't ya just give up, boy,
And call it all a day?
You won't 'cause you're a man, boy,
You will yourself betray.

Two Sources Of Learning

There are two sources of learning, books and people. The former is forced on the student and is subsequently superficial and erodes with time. Strangely, we pay most dearly for this kind. The latter is enjoyed and reviewed constantly, and costs nothing but time.
What will you choose, Benns or John Doe?

Mud

Health to you, harbor of life from age upon age;
Peace! Degraded soul hovering o'er your eternal watches as empires fall and rise, and rise and fall.
Your kingdom too, if need be must meet disaster, then triumph, as the two greatest elements, the sun and the water, demand of you.
You master a world of overwhelming population.
How is it, then, that humans lift a harsh, united cry in lament of your existence?
Yours is an abundantly, luxuriously wealthy commune, inhabitants cramming the very limits;
And as petty nations resent the strong, the spreading neighbor, so does man abhor you, is filled with disgust for you—
And with repugnance,
And with horror.
Therefore, let not the human race revere you as an empire; but as a man of numerous and great achievements;
As is revered a sleek and beautifully proportioned greyhound;
As is a mellow, good year champagne;
As is a Nobel Prize winner;
As is a conquering army home with spoils . . .
A pity you cannot shout in defiance to the world—now and forever unfeeling—of its baseness.
A pity, yes, but you have no voice.

Peggy Colvin

Mud

Mucky brownish green and gooey stinking
lies the mud;
Dead it seems, but lo! It is the pulsing bosom of earth.
In this muck lies life—ever struggling,
hoping, dying;
In this world no beast is king—all are lowly subjects
Of the sea; The Master covers all at will and uncovers—
Crying seagulls swoop down low and stagger
in the mud,
Scratching, probing, digging, fighting,
searching just to eat.
Some may die so others live . . . And they call this life.
Mucky brownish green and gooey stinking
lies the mud—but not for long . . .

Grey Real

The name rang through my ears. It was not mine. I wasn't good enough. I felt nothing. Not sad, not shocked, not happy for him, not envious. It was not mine. I felt like an observer, not interested, but not ignorant of the prize and the smiles and the handshaking and applause and I applauded him and I hated him. Envy engulfed me and was gone. I rose and went to congratulate him and I shook his hand because that is the thing to do. I said Magnificent. Really Magnificent. He smiled. I hated him. It was not my name. I left and the hate and envy returned now and left then. He was good. I hated him. Magnificent. Really magnificent I said and I wasn't good enough. Next time they say. Do next time. And I hated him and now I hate I and It wasn't my name It was not mine.

To Have And To Be

"And what do you do? asked one man upon encountering another.

The second man paused and contemplated a moment before answering. Then he quite sadly replied, "Does it not matter at all to you who I am?"

Judy Little

Jewelers of Time

Four years is an eternity while you're living it but a micro-moment when you're reviewing it. Live it right, and it will come out a diamond. Botch it, and you'll get a lump of coal. Everyone started with the coal, but some left it and themselves basically the same. Those who pressured it into a diamond by their intellect and their will are truly the jewelers of time.

Chris Alvord

Five O'Clock Shadow

The traffic sits in a sprawling heap, growling,
and snapping at its tail.
The student, absorbed by the window, sighs and hurries on.
The flag flaps flaccidly and hangs idle.
The sun complains to itself and counts the wrinkles on its face.
The church sits lonely and empty.
The traveler, exhausted, orders some coffee.
The housewife wonders where the day has gone
so quickly.
The husband realizes the weight of his burdens.
When the day is nearly over, all of God's creations are tired and feeble and weak
And sleep is hours away.

Terry Quinn

In The Moonlight

They walked hand in hand along the water's edge,
The little ripples lapping playfully at their unshod feet.
This was his last night, for war was in the air;
And before the sun rose, he would be gone—
For how long only God knew.

Quietly the imprints in the sand stopped; she turned,
letting the moonlight glisten in her tears . . .
Alone—together—but only for one fleeting moment—
For the tide slowly crept up, erasing the imprints one . . . by one . . .

Jan Goss

Conquest

Man looks up from his pebble
At night,
And thinks, "Ah, tomorrow,
Or perhaps the day after that,
We will have conquered the skies."

Tomorrow comes,
And man has done what he set out to do yesterday.
But certain brilliantly awesome orbs
of fiery nuclear hell
Go about their business of existing,
Never knowing of the magnificent feats of a certain glorified primate,
And never caring.

Bruce Knight

Cogitation

When upon a lazy day
My proper work I ceased to do
And spent my time in thinking long
Of why the world exists and who
I came to wonder why men are
And when they wonder too Thoughts that shake their world around
Become their work and you
The life they lead is fraught with thought Think what time there is to think
Think of when it started back Think what existence was or is Think of why men think they think
Or how they think or knew
The simple life you thought you had
Thinks no longer true.

Bill Kennedy

Life Impregnable

What good is love if there is so much hate,
What good is wanting if you have to wait?
What good is giving when so many only take,
What good are promises that many people break?
What good is happiness when so many cry,
What good is truth when so many lie?
What good is hope when there is so much disbelieving,
What good is trust if there is so much deceiving?
What good is liberty when used by a few,
What good is something old when replaced by something new?
What good are eyes if people won't look around,
What good is the sky when men stare at the ground?
What good is faith if one never says a prayer,
What good are we to God when so many just don't care?

Polly Miller

Human Fever

So the hidden boundaries i pass,
i know that under the fresh snow lies an old trace.
despite the falling snow and darkness,
i plow a path to retrace,
a trail the blowing snow will soon erase.

It is far beyond my ken,
why this path i have journeyed.
One the snow covers again and again.
yet still i slowly proceed,
in a vain hope to someday succeed.

There must be some resplendent goal to force me on through this snow and sleet.
For without glory or extol,
i challenge the hardships without retreat.
Man shall never accept defeat.

Vicky Hurst

It happens this way

It happens this way (not every day)
Once in many years and
You're happy (but how un and sad)
Why you say and ask
But it just happens (it sure was long)
It took work and joy and sorrow and Why you say and ask (the tears come yet it's happy and sad but don't hold back)
Be unashamed and share
The it event is so rare and they've he's she's gone gone gone went Left and right you look (how long it took)
But it's gone and someday again it
Will but when (oh the joy is so sad)
And Why you say and ask
It is gone gone gone but you
You change you wait you will (but when and then I do you I will recall the work and sad joy)
It's gone and now inside so it goes (you wait you'll go too) unless you went gone gone
It's past and now is to come Yes
It happens this way
